THE ARCHAEOLOGICAL PARK

Monte Barro Archaeological Park, a unique and wonderful place, is located a few minutes away from Lecco and less than an hour from Milan. Visitors can go back 1500 years in time just by walking among the ancient woods and marvellous landscapes of Brianza’s mountains and lakes.

Venturing into the Park, you will find many archaeological remains, dating back to the time of the Romans and of the Goths; the latter were a barbarian community, who founded the first Kingdom of Italy after the fall of the Roman Empire in 476 A.D.

Along the visit routes, you can dive into the historical places of the most important settlement of the Gothic Age discovered in Italy. Here it will be possible for you to walk among the ancient buildings and along the sections of the security walls which, with its towers, protected the settlement in the V and VI century A.D.

All the visit areas are collocated along well-signed paths which, through numerous panels and reconstructive drawings, will help the visitor learn about and understand one of the most important periods of Europe’s history.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

In 286 A.D. the Roman emperor Diocletian divided the Empire and chose Milan as the capital of the Western Roman Empire, thanks to its economic, military and political value.

During the fourth and fifth centuries A.D., several castles and heavily fortified settlements were built to protect the villages south of the Aps from the barbarian raids.

The Lake Como area had a very important role in defending Milan and its neighbouring zones due to its position near transalpine passes and roads.

With the end of the Western Roman Empire in 476 A.D., the Italian peninsula became an independent reign. It was first ruled by the Herulian king Odoacer and then, from 493 to 553 A.D., by Theodoric the Great, leader of the Eastern Goths, also known as Ostrogoths.

The fortified settlement of Monte Barro, which had been founded by skilled Roman workers as a control point of the area, was later occupied by the Ostrogoths, until a fire caused its definitive abandonment around 540 A.D.

VISIT AREAS

The Park offers four different areas, which can be visited separately or as a single route making it possible for the visitor to discover more about the ancient history of the territory.

The Piani di Barra area is the main archaeological site, extending in an enchanting beech tree wood, where you can walk around the fortified Goth nucleus, which preserves the ruins of the ancient buildings excavated by archaeologists.
From the Murai oo area, you can proceed along an idyllic path overlooking Brianza lakes on one of the sections of the defensive wall, which protected the inhabited centre from the attacks of enemies with its watchtowers.

The Monte Castelletto area represents the latest archaeological discovery inside Monte Barro Park and preserves the ruins of a medieval tower with a fortified fenced area of XIII century A.D. The archaeologists are still working on this site, as there is still much to discover.

The Archaeological Museum – M.A.B. exhibits the various findings discovered in the archaeological areas of the Park. The main collection shows the original everyday objects of the V and VI century A.D. found in the Goths’ buildings. This is the final stage of the itinerary.

PIANI DI BARRA

The nucleus of the settlement founded by the Romans in the V century AD and subsequently conquered by the Goths was discovered at Piani di Barra at an altitude of 600 metres, on the western slopes of Monte Barro.

The archaeological excavations that were carried out in this area between 1984 and 1997 led to the discovery of 11 buildings that were home to a garrison of soldiers and their families.

Other ruins have been found by archaeologists, but they are still untouched as excavations haven’t started yet.

One of the most important buildings is the so-called Grande Edificio, the large building in the centre of the village where the military head of the garrison or the governor stayed. Inside the excavation site some of the most precious artefacts were found, such as the Corona Pensile of Monte Barro, the famous hanging crown, a unique masterpiece. The entire collection is displayed in the archaeological museum.

Following the undemanding circular route through fields and woods the visitors can still feel the ancient atmosphere of 1500 years ago. Panels with descriptions and drawings reconstructing the original aspect of the structures help visitors to better understand the customs and daily life of their ancient inhabitants.

HOW TO GET THERE

Visitors can reach all the buildings starting with the Grande Edificio by following a ring-shaped path. The trail starts at Piazzale degli Alpini, which is located on the road from Galbiate to the Eremo del Monte Barro, just a few bends before it. From the parking site just follow the directions and the illustrated panels on the road.

THE MURAIOO

Between the V and VI century A.D., the period in which the rediscovered settlement near Piani di Barra was inhabited, the southern side of the mountain, naturally less steep, was fortified with a long defensive wall as protection from enemy attack.

Atop the wall, made of stone blocks bound with mortar, there was a walkway approximately one meter wide. The wall was intercut with a series of square watchtowers.

The part of the wall found by the archaeologists, still maintained today, is about 1200 meters long and includes the remains of three towers.

The Muraiolo was an integral part of the complex fortified system, which included Monte Barro and the nearby areas. The system was developed by the Romans in the last centuries of the empire to protect the Northern regions from the frequent barbaric incursions.

From the path along the Muraiolo you can admire a panoramic view of the green hills and the Brianza lakes, which form a crown at the bottom of the Prealpi Lombarde.

HOW TO GET THERE

The route starts from the Eremo del Monte Barro and follows the whole visible part of the Muraiolo. It continues on a well-marked and scenic path, Il sentiero delle Torri (n.307), only accessible on foot.

MONTE CASTELLETTO

The archaeological area of Monte Castelletto is a recent discovery made in 2007 as a result of extensive surface research. The site, which was excavated between 2011 and 2015, consists of the remains of a medieval tower attached to the town walls which contained a small cluster of buildings.

The site is located on a hill on the eastern side of Monte Barro where the natural topography of the area, overlooking the Adda River, the city of Lecco and all transport routes, made it an ideal place for the construction of a fortress.

The structures that are currently visible on the spot date back to the most recent period of the settlement when in the XIII century a small military garrison controlled the tower and the surrounding territory. The excavations have shown that people started to settle there much earlier, starting at least from the VIII century. Research is still in progress and older sections of the settlement haven't been excavated yet.

A well-marked path in the wood leads to the site after a short walk through the woods. Once there an illustrative panel describes the findings and how they were unearthed during the archaeological excavations.

HOW TO GET THERE

From Galbiate follow the directions to San Michele. Park your car in the parking site near the unfinished church of San Michele and walk along a dirt road as far as a clearing where you will see a road barrier. From there keep to the right and follow the path downhill through the wood where you will find the signs leading to Monte Castelletto. It will take about 15 minutes to get there.

THE ARCHAEOLOGICAL MUSEUM – M.A.B.

Monte Barro Archaeological Museum is where more than 400 original artefacts are stored, all discovered during archaeological excavations at Piani di Barra and Monte Castelletto.

The most significant and valuable exhibits are displayed in the Museum and enhance the guided tour of the archaeological areas of the Park.

RESEARCH

RESEARCH AT PIANI DI BARRA

Stories about the legendary town of Barra, on Monte Barro, were handed down through the centuries: for some it was the capital of Orobi, also mentioned by Pliny the Elder, while others believed it to be a late Roman walled village.

In the XII century, for example, the Chronica by Dominican friar Galvano Fiamma recalls a fortified place, named Civitas de Barri, where Gerberga, the daughter of the last Lombard king Desiderius, supposedly found a safe shelter while she was on the run from Charlemagne. In the 1960s, thanks to some sporadic research the remains of buried walls and some isolated artefacts were discovered.

Systematic research was carried out only from 1985, when the Consortium Monte Barro Park was founded and the first excavation campaigns started. The excavations were carried out between 1986 and 1997. During these campaigns the remains of several buildings as well as a fortified settlement built by the Goths during the V and the VI centuries A.D. were discovered, proving the old tales to be true.

After these discoveries, the Archaeological Park and the Museum were opened, allowing the remains of the ancient constructions to be preserved and the artefacts to be displayed.
ONGOING RESEARCH AT MONTE CASTELLETTO

The site of Monte Castelletto was discovered in 2007 during an archaeological campaign. The structures currently visible were completely buried and no one knew about the existence of the archaeological site.

The name of the mount, Castelletto (meaning “small castle”), the morphology and topology of the territory, as well as the presence of stone blocks, led archaeologists to postulate the existence of a fortified structure.

In 2011, 2013 and 2015 three different excavation campaigns were carried out in order to gather information about the nature of this site.

It is assumed that different populations lived here between 700 and 1400 a. D. There is still a lot to discover about the older civilizations because research has yet to be concluded.
